

Questioning of Swedish Spy To Go On for Rest of Year

STOCKHOLM, Oct. 14--Werner Rhyningger, the public prosecutor, reported today that the interrogation of Col. Stig Wennerstrom, confessed Soviet spy, would probably continue at least until the end of the year.

The state is trying to find out how much damage the former air force officer and disarmament adviser has done to the nation's security.

Colonel Wennerstrom, who was arrested June 20, has admitted to having spied for the Soviet Union for 15 years. He is expected to go on trial early next year. He faces a life sentence.

In a progress report on the interrogation, Mr. Rhyningger quoted the colonel as having said that he had given the Russians "information about the air force to a considerable extent" and that he had "given out important particulars" on the navy.
